Jones & Keller provides litigation and counseling services relating to competition issues in a wide variety of industries.

We represent clients in antitrust investigations and litigation before federal, state and administrative tribunals, from the trial through the highest appellate levels, including the United States Supreme Court. The head of this practice area served for 8 ½ years as the chief antitrust lawyer for the State of Colorado. Our litigation experience in this regard includes prosecuting and defending virtually every type of antitrust, competition, trade regulation and unfair trade practice claim – including bid rigging, boycott and refusal to deal, exclusive dealing, actual and attempted monopolization, conspiracy to monopolize, predatory pricing, price discrimination, price fixing, restraint of trade, sales below cost, tying and the like.

We provide our clients with advice and counseling on the antitrust implications of business activities such as pricing; dealing arrangements and distribution networks; joint ventures, mergers and acquisitions; and trade organizations. We also develop antitrust compliance plans.

Our clients in this area have included members of the commercial printing, construction, energy, healthcare, insurance, medical technology, news media, public utilities, resort, telecommunications, television and transportation industries, among others.
