Attorneys at Jones & Keller have extensive international legal and business experience, providing services to American clients doing business overseas, and international clients doing business in the U.S. and abroad. Our attorneys have extensive experience crafting business transactions in Europe, Asia, Africa, South America and the countries of the former Soviet Union. Our lawyers understand the value of patience, communication and education in the international business process. Multi-cultural business arrangements often require sensitive analysis of a variety of uncommon factors, specific to the cultures involved.

We help our U.S. clients pursue their business goals in international markets worldwide. Our international clients include international mining companies, oil and gas companies, power projects, manufacturing companies, multinational trading companies, financial institutions, foreign governments, trade associations and individuals. To provide just a few examples, we have helped our clients to establish oil & gas facilities in South Africa, food processing facilities in Siberia, charter a bank in Russia, enact a mining law in Mongolia, build a concentrator in Spain, quarry quartz in Australia, distribute packaging products across Europe and negotiate infrastructure and procurement contracts in China.
